THE TARIFF BILL.

President Cleveland's Letter to Mr. Catchings. He Considers the Senate Measure Better Than the McKinley Law, and Discusses the Necessity for Free Raw Material.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 27.

President Cleveland allowed the Tariff bill to become a law to-day, and gave his reasons for neither signing nor vetoing it in a stirring letter to Representative Catchings, of Mississippi, one of the leaders of the House:

"Executive Mansion, Washington, D. C., Aug. 27, 1894.—Hon. T. C. Catchings—My Dear Sir: Since the conversation I had with you and Mr. Clarke, of Alabama, a few days ago, in regard to my action upon the Tariff bill now before me, I have given the subject further and most serious consideration. The result is I am more settled than ever in the determination to allow the bill to become a law without my signature.

"When the formation of legislation which it was hoped would embody Democratic ideas of Tariff Reform was lately entered upon by Congress, nothing was further from my anticipation than a result which I could not promptly and enthusiastically indorse.

"It is, therefore, with a feeling of the utmost disappointment that I submit to a denial of this privilege.

"I do not claim to be better than the masses of my party, nor do I wish to avoid any responsibility which, on account of the passage of this law, I ought to bear as a member of the Democratic organization. Neither will I permit myself to be separated from my party to such an extent as might be implied by my veto of tariff legislation which, though disappointing, is still chargeable to Democratic effort. But there are provisions in this bill which are not in line with honest Tariff Reform, and it contains inconsistencies and crudities which ought not to appear in tariff laws or law of any kind. Besides, there were, as you and I well know, incidents accompanying the passage of the bill through the Congress, which made every sincere Tariff Reformer unhappy, while influences surrounded it in its latest stages and interfered with its final construction which ought not to be recognized or tolerated in Democratic Tariff Reform counsels.

"And yet, notwithstanding all its vicissitudes and all the bad treatment it received at the hands of pretended friends, it presents a vast improvement on existing conditions. It will certainly lighten many tariff burdens that now rest heavily upon the people. It is not only a barrier against the return of mad protection, but it furnishes a vantage ground from which must be waged further aggressive operations against protected monopoly and governmental favoritism.

"I take my place with the rank and file of the Democratic party, who believe in Tariff Reform and who know what it is; who refuse to accept the results embodied in this bill at the close of the war; who are not blinded to the fact that the livery of Democratic Tariff Reform has been stolen and worn in the service of Republican protection, and who have marked the places where the deadly blight of treason has blasted the counsels of the brave in their hour of might.

"The trusts and combinations—the communism of pelf—whose machinations have prevented us from reaching the success we deserved, should not be forgotten nor forgiven. We shall recover from our astonishment at their exhibition of power, and if then the question is forced upon us whether they shall submit to the free legislative will of the people's representatives or shall dictate the laws which the people must obey, we will accept and settle that issue as one involving the integrity and safety of American institutions.

"I love the principles of true Democracy because they are founded in patriotism and upon justice and fairness toward all interests. I am proud of my party organization because it is conservatively sturdy and persistent in the enforcement of its principles. Therefore I do not despair of the efforts made by the House of Representatives to supplement the bill already passed by further legislation, and to have engrafted upon it such modifications as will more nearly meet Democratic hopes and aspirations.

"I cannot be mistaken as to the necessity of free raw materials as the foundation of logical and sensible Tariff Reform. The extent to which this is recognized in the legislation already secured is one of its encouraging and redeeming features; but it is vexatious to recall that while free coal and iron ore have been denied us, a recent letter of the Secretary of the Treasury discloses the fact that both might have been made free by the annual surrender of only about $700,000 of unnecessary revenue.

"I am sure that there is a common habit of underestimating the importance of free raw materials in tariff legislation, and of regarding them as only related to concessions to be made to our manufacturers. The truth is their influence is so far-reaching that, if disregarded, a complete and beneficent scheme of Tariff Reform cannot be successfully inaugurated.

"When we give to our manufacturers free raw materials we unshackle American enterprise and ingenuity, and these will open the doors of foreign markets to the reception of our wares and give opportunity for the continuous and remunerative employment of American labor.

"With materials cheapened by their freedom from tariff charges the cost of their product must be correspondingly cheapened. Thereupon justice and fairness to the consumer would demand that the manufacturers be obliged to submit to such a readjustment and modification of the tariff upon their finished goods as would secure to the people the benefit of the reduced cost of their manufacture, and shield the consumer against the exaction of inordinate profits.

"It will thus be seen that free raw materials and a just and fearless regulation and reduction of the tariff to meet the changed conditions would carry to every humble home in the land the blessings of increased comfort and cheaper living.

"The millions of our countrymen who have fought bravely and well for Tariff Reform should be exhorted to continue the struggle, boldly challenging to open warfare and constantly guarding against the treachery and half-heartedness in their camp.

"Tariff Reform will not be settled until it is honestly and fairly settled in the interest and to the benefit of a patient and long-suffering people."

"Yours very truly,

"GROVER CLEVELAND."

What Congress Has Done.

How the Democrats Have Redeemed Party Pledges.

A letter from Washington was published in the Phila. Record last Saturday a week which contained a speech made by Mr. McMillan, of Tennessee, in which he proves that the Democrats have done a good work and their duty in so far as obstructions permitted. After reviewing what laws it has heretofore framed, Mr. McMillan says: "I come to a few of the things it has done during this Administration. It has repealed all force laws and left elections free. It found a system of oppressive laws on the statute books authorizing the use of troops at the polls, and has repealed them. In the dark days of the republic the Republican party also enacted a law authorizing the United States supervisors of election and deputy marshals to be appointed by the Federal Courts wholly independent of the States where elections were to be held. They were expected to dominate, and did dominate the elections.

"Thousands of men were arrested without cause and imprisoned without reason in the States of New York, Ohio, and Indiana in a single election—and imprisoned to prevent them from voting. They were turned out after it was too late to vote without the formality of indictment, presentment, arraignment or trial. The Democratic party determined this should not continue. To repeal it it forced an extra session of Congress in 1879, and passed the repealing bill. Mr. Hayes vetoed it. But it has kept up the fight nearly a sixth of a century, and at last has triumphed during this administration. It has repealed the law authorizing the President to levy and remit taxes. I cannot conceive of a surrender of a great prerogative more dangerous and unpardonable than this. We denounced it at the time in this hall. We went forth to the people and denounced it. We pledged them in our platform that if intrusted with power we would wrest this ancient right from the President, to whom it had been improperly surrendered, and give it back to the people's representatives. We have now kept the promise."

Mr. McMillan next reviews the reductions of appropriations heretofore set forth by Representative Sayres, of the Appropriation Committee. He then continues: "It has passed the most stringent law against trusts ever enacted in this country. At the same time the Attorney General has instituted proceedings in the Courts to try to dissolve illegal trusts.

"The amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama (Mr. Morgan)," he says, "carries into law the most effective means ever yet devised for controlling and curbing the power of trusts. A law against them was passed last Congress, but it dealt with the question in a way so mild and gingerly that it has not been found sufficient to crush these combinations that have been fostered under Protection. The Democratic party was pledged to the enactment of more stringent legislation against trusts. It has kept this pledge, and offers this as its fulfillment. It has inaugurated an income tax, thereby taking taxes off want and putting them on wealth. It is true the Senate amendments have changed somewhat this feature of the bill and have released some that ought to have been taxed; still it remains a great benefit to the American people. It found the Treasury bankrupt, and by the Tariff bill is not only replenishing it, but it is at the same time greatly reducing taxes."

Mr. McMillin then reviews the repeal of the Sherman Silver Purchase law, and gives an elaborate summary of the tariff.

Examine the Registry List.

Voters should examine the registry list and see that they are properly enrolled. The law requires the assessors to return the list to the county commissioners not later than sixty days before election. November 6th will be election day this year and the last day on which registration can be legally made will be September 6th. By attending to the registration trouble can be saved on election day.

Hints on Physical Culture.

Laws of Life.

The chest should never be relaxed; it must always be held to its highest altitude. This one exercise of lifting the chest sets all the muscles moving.

Educate the muscles by practicing this exercise frequently a few minutes at a time. Shakespeare says, "Habit soon becomes might." The results will be shown in better digestion, deeper respiration, and a more decided vital expression.

The normal standing position, weight on the balls of the feet, heels lightly touching, is of itself a powerful exercise, especially if the chest is raised to its highest point. The chin, chest and toes should be on a vertical line. Bending the knees in walking, as many women do, gives a slovenly gait and the appearance of feebleness to the whole body.

Striking on the heels in walking jars the brain with every step. Standing with the weight on the heels tires the spinal column. A blow on the heel is a blow on the spinal column.

Going up stairs, if rightly practiced, is healthful exercise; but the body should be held erect, and the foot should leave each step with a springing, elastic movement.

The arms should swing as pendulums from the shoulders and hang flexibly at the side. In the polite world ladies do not swing their arms. Standing with arms akimbo with either or both hands on the hips is never permissible. Nor is it allowable to fold them over or upon the abdomen, the almost universal habit with Americans. The elbow is self-assertive, and should always be as inconspicuous as possible.

In talking, guard against the numerous facial gestures of contracting the brow or mouth, raising the eyebrows, and screwing up the lips. These are all evidences of a want of self-control, besides being a waste of energy. The continual inane "grin of the lips" that some people think necessary in conversation, or even in listening to others, is tiresome and hypocritical. It is a habit that carves many an unnecessary wrinkle in the face

We have all heard of the German who having been fooled by a joker who pointed to a church steeple and asked: "How is that for high?" immediately went home, called his wife out into the yard, and, pointing to the neighboring shot tower, asked, with ill-suppressed mirth: "How high vas dot?"

PENNY POSTAGE.

A Well-Organized Movement for Cheaper Rates.

It is not impossible that within a short time the postal regulations may be so revised as to bring about the long-desired rates of penny postage. At least, ex-Postmaster General Wanamaker, who is an ardent advocate of penny postage, thinks so, and the movement seems to be gaining considerable headway in Philadelphia. Prominent financial institutions, manufacturing concerns and business men in general have received documents and literature bearing upon this subject, sent out by the National Postage Movement, of which Lyman J. Gage is treasurer, urging the employment of all possible influences to induce Congress to enact a law reducing the rates of letter postage.

The National Postage Movement is a voluntary association of business men, banded together with the object in view of equalizing the revenues of the Post Office Department. It is claimed that under the present laws not only the citizen but the Government, as well, loses money by the poor regulations. The importance of the movement will readily be seen when it has been proven that the Post Office Department is at present losing $19,000,000 annually.

The association aims to make the following changes: A reduction in letter postage to one cent per ounce or fraction thereof; exclude serial publications, paper covered books and trashy literature from second-class matter, at one cent per pound, and have them go as third-class matter, at eight cents per pound, and to reduce postage on merchandise from sixteen cents to eight cents per pound.

Post Office statistics prove that in 1893 the Post Office handled over 360,000,000 pounds of this second-class matter at a loss of 6 cents per pound—a total loss of over $19,000,000—over 85 per cent. trashy literature—less than 15 per cent. newspapers and legitimate publications—only 54,000,000 pounds justly entitled to go at one cent per pound, because newspapers, magazines and legitimate publications are the medium through which information is brought directly to the masses.

The idea of the association is to force the publishers of cheap literature to pay 8 cents per pound, which, on the basis of last year's business, would be one cent per pound profit, or a change in revenue of $21,420,000. It is claimed that penny postage, with no increased tonnage of letters, would cause a loss of about $6,000,000 annually. But with the changes in the other classes of mail matter, this apparent loss would be obviated, with a net gain of about $20,000,000 annually.

Said a prominent business man yesterday, who is working for the movement: "Two-cent stamps cost the Government 17 cents per 1,000; they cost us $20. Our letters average about 60 to the pound; we pay two cents each, or $1.20 per pound, and not two cents per ounce or fraction thereof, or 32 cents per pound, as you suppose. Why this discrimination against business men? Why should we pay an unjust profit on our letters our proportion of $12,000,000 annually as a special tax, when we pay each year our pro rata of all taxes paid by others?"

Mr. Wanamaker is heartily in favor of the movement. When questioned concerning the matter of reduced, or rather equalized, postage rates, he expressed himself in the following strong terms: "The average cost to the Government in handling all classes of mail matter is about 7 cents per pound. The bulk of second-class matter monopolizes space in postal cars, and increases the cost of handling and transportation, so the expense on second-class matter fully equals the cost per pound of handling letter mail. One cent postage on letters will be successfully demanded in time. I believe that time is not far off. As the first step toward 1-cent postage, I recommend the passage of an act to credit the department for all the mail carried, no matter where it originates. One cent letter postage is a near possibility, for the reason a 2-cent stamp produces much more than the amount of expense of handling the letter mail; hence it is urged that the postage on this class of mail matter should be reduced. The present letter rate pays actually much more than double the cost, and by this overpay serves as a protective rate to the department to cover the underpay for the express business it does for periodicals and books, and for carrying advertising sheets, at 1 cent per pound, that load the mails enormously, and are, in point of fact, nothing more than business circulars. All such mail is not only carried at a loss of 6 cents per pound, but it interferes materially with the business."—Phila. Record.

FORESTS.

The American people do not altogether trust their Legislatures, and so it happens that every new Constitution puts new curbs on Legislative discretion. The people of New York are even now proposing to get what forests they have left under the wing of constitutional protection, so that they shall not be sold, exchanged nor allowed to pass into possession of any person or corporation, nor be cut down nor leased for any purpose except for the temporary occupancy of campers not on errands of destruction. The idea of taking the State forests out of the reach of further ravage is most laudable and may be defended on the highest ground of public advantage.—Phila. Record.

Hatched Eggs Two Years Old.

Although many other methods have been tried for preserving eggs, no one has been found of the same practical value as the ordinary lime and water system. It is generally supposed that preserved eggs are of no use for hatching purposes, but a French naturalist states that he has hatched chickens from eggs over two years old. The process of preservation adopted consists in dissolving some gum lac in a sufficient quantity of alcohol to make a slight glaze. Into this thick liquid each egg is dipped and then allowed to dry, after which they were packed in bran and sawdust, the large end upwards. When the eggs were required for hatching, the glaze was carefully removed by washing each egg in alcohol, and then it was found that they were practically the same as when preserved. This, if correct, would be a most important discovery, for hitherto it has been regarded as impossible to hatch from eggs more than a few weeks old.

A BUSINESS MARRIAGE.

From Punch.

['Marriage is daily becoming a more commercial affair."—A Society Paper.]

Dear Fred.—Your favor of the 3d
Has had my very best attention,
But yet I cannot, in a word,
Accept you on the terms you mention;
Indeed wherever you may try,
According to the last advices,
You'll meet, I fear, the same reply—
"It can't be done, at current prices!"

In vain an ancient name you show,
In vain for intellect are noted,
Blue blood and brains, you surely know,
At nominal amounts are quoted;
And then, I see, you're weak enough
To offer "love, sincere, unstudied."
Why, sir, with such Quixotic stuff
The market's absolutely flooded!

But—every day this fact confirms—
The time is over for romances,
And whether we can come to terms
Depends alone on your finances,
So, would you think me overbold
If I, with deference, requested
A statement of what funds you hold?
In what securities invested?

For, candidly, in such affairs
A speedy bid your only chance is,
A boom in Yankee millionaires
May soon result in marked advances;
With you I'd willingly be wed,
To like you well enough I'm able,
But first submit your bank book, Fred,
To your (perhaps) devoted Mabel!

WARNED BY AN APPARITION.

A VISION IN A MIRROR.

"In my youth we never heard of this thing you call mental telegraphy, theosophy and the like," said a lady recently, "but every now and then there took place, as now, occurrences which puzzled the thoughtful, though they had no name to give the phenomena. But, like most young girls, I was skeptical of all that was not directly natural when I thought of it at all, which was not often, until I had the experience I am going to tell you of, which was so strange that it upset me for some weeks, which agitation came not so much from the real shock and fright that I suffered as from the mysterious circumstances that attended it.

"My own home was a country place some fifteen miles from a large city where I had several families of relatives whom I visited once or twice a year, or whenever there was to be given any ball or opera or festivity of sufficient importance for me to desire to attend it. I was just 17 when a royal personage from Europe came across the pond to get a peep at the Yankees.

"There was to be a series of entertainments given in honor of his Highness, and I, like the rest of the world, must attend in all the finery my father's ample means allowed me. From my mother's side of the family I had inherited some very fine diamonds, amounting in value to over $10,000 and even a great deal more in those days when these gems were not so common, and on this occasion I teased my father to let me wear them. I had no mother to tell me that such rich jewelry was not in the best of taste on one so young and an unmarried woman, so when I started for the city I carried the diamonds with me. But my maid was an elderly woman who had also been my nurse since my motherless babyhood, and the jewels were in her care. Unfortunately, however, Marian fell ill the day after I left home, and, being confined to her bed, I was dependent on my aunt's maid for services in my dressing, etc. In order to lighten this woman's duties, which were heavy, as my cousins also frequently required her aid as hair-dresser and seamstress, I looked after my clothes and waited on myself as much as possible, performing such acts of my toilette as I could.

"It thus happened that one night, after returning from a reception at the house of a foreign Consul, I disrobed myself of my trained evening dress and slipping on a loose sack sat down to brush my hair before retiring. My seat was just in front of a large glass above my dresser or what was then called a "bureau," on which I had placed jewelry I had worn—the diamonds I have spoken of.

"As I plied my brush my eyes naturally fell on this mirror, which reflected the room behind me, and as I continued to look I saw evolving itself apparently from the empty air the figure of a man. He was well dressed, even stylishly, and was after a fashion handsome, but deathly pale, and his eyes glittered feverishly.

"He crept nearer and nearer to me, seeming to look only at the diamonds loosely strewn upon the marble before me, but his right hand was thrust into his breast, and, as he stood over me, he suddenly jerked it out and raised high above me a small Spanish dagger, the hilt of which was of dead gold, or Etruscan gold, as it is called. This was set with rubies, which I noticed with that particular attention to trifles so often displayed in moments of danger. Up to this point I had been too terrified to call out or even to move, not even turning my head to look behind me, but watching the movements of the assassin as they were reflected in the mirror. But, as he brought down his hand with a swift, murderous motion to strike me from my chair with a single blow, the spell that had held me snapped, and I sprang to my feet with a shriek of terror and rushed to the door.

"Even as I ran I wondered at not encountering the man, but though I could not remember afterwards of seeing him at all I did not stay, but unlocking the door flung it open, still screaming as fast as the sounds could issue from my lips. It happened that two of my young men cousins had lingered later than the rest of the family at the entertainment referred to, and having just come in, were coming up the main staircase, close to my room. Rushing to these, I threw myself into the arms of the nearest, Christopher, shrieking: 'The man! oh, the man!'

"The two young men hurried to my room, and looked about, but could see no one. The windows were all fastened, and as I had myself just come out of the single door to the apartment, and from which no one else could have slipped without us seeing them, the only chance was for the burglar to have concealed himself in the room.

"By this time the rest of the household was aroused, and not only my room, but the entire place was thoroughly searched. The three windows of the room were provided with heavy old-fashioned shutters, two of them opening on the street, an unbroken descent of over forty feet, while the other had not been unclosed for years, for it looked almost into one in the next house, which was also tightly secured. The house itself was occupied by a respectable family in straitened circumstances. It therefore seemed an impossibility for a man to have entered the room unseen by me and to have made his escape in the few seconds it took my cousins to reach the spot where I had seen him. So it was thought that I had fallen asleep in my chair and my vision had been the result of my late supper of minced chicken and champagne, and though I was still shivering from my fright, I allowed myself to be almost persuaded that this was the real truth.

"By the next night I had so thoroughly been laughed into believing this that I took my seat before the mirror and began brushing my hair as nonchalantly as at first, when to my utter horror I saw that figure form itself from nothing, absolutely nothing, and again advance upon me with that menacing attitude. Again it raised its hand to strike, the terrible eyes seemed to glare into mine fixed on them in the mirror, and as before, released from the horror that held me stricken into marble, I leaped to my feet and ran screaming into the corridor without. I glanced back into the room, but there was no one visible there, but I was not to be convinced this time that an overheated imagination was to blame. I fled to my aunt's door and as she opened it fell fainting in her arms. I was not to be stirred from my belief that my life had been threatened in that dreadful room by all the searching and arguments that were made, and announced my intention of returning home in the morning.

"But the next night was to be that of the grand ball given in honor of the prince, and that, with the fact that I had the prettiest gown in the city to wear, finally prevailed on me to alter my mind, though I made it a condition that Marian my maid, was to occupy a little antechamber opening into mine and that my stalwart cousin Christopher, who was afterwards my loved husband for nearly forty years, was to sleep on a cot in the hall just outside my door. So with a contented mind I went to the ball, returning late to find my good maid asleep, and as she was still not well I crept quietly in and proceeded to undress.

"I let down my hair, and, though too fatigued to brush it as usual, sat for some moments looking at myself in the glass—I was a little vain in those days—when all at once I saw behind me the man with his knife in his hand.

"But this time he did not evolve from air, but was there real flesh and blood, his hot breath nearly scorching the back of my neck. I leaped to my feet with a scream, and as I did so he struck at me, but the blade glanced aside, wounding me only slightly in the shoulder. I screamed aloud and he felled me with a blow just as Marian and Christopher came rushing in. Seeing them the robber and assassin sprang for the open window and would have escaped by leaping—an easy feat for a muscular man—in the window of the house next door, which was also open and only about three feet distant. This had evidently been the way by which he had entered and which he had used as an egress. But Christopher caught him and dragged him back, and, after a struggle, secured him, aided by his brothers, who had been summoned by Marian, so when I opened my eyes from my swoon it was to see the would-be murderer lying bound, while near me lay a small dagger with a handle of Etruscan gold studded with flawed rubies.

"But here is the strange part of the story. On the night of his capture he had entered my room for the first time, though on the two previous nights he had watched me through the shutters of the two windows. He was a son of the family residing next door, and, from love of dress and pleasure beyond his means, had involved himself hopelessly in debt, and seeing my diamonds had conceived the idea of killing or at least silencing me, and stealing them to pay his debts. But though his mind had dwelt persistently on the scheme, he had lacked courage to carry it out until the night of the ball, when, pressed by an importunate creditor, he had let himself into the room, where he had concealed himself until my arrival, not knowing of the protectors I had been warned to have near me."

A Treacherous Memory.

A day or two ago the most forgetful man in Chatham went into Sam Kelly's grocery, and when he stepped up to the counter he looked around and scratched his head in a most perplexed way and said:

"Sam, I came in for something, and for the life of me I cannot remember what it is."

"Perhaps it is molasses?" said Sam.

"No," replied the forgetful man; "it cannot be molasses, I am sure, because I didn't bring a jug with me."

"Is it a bottle of Worcestershire sauce?"

"No, because we never use anything in that line but catsup."

"Is it beef extract?"

"No. I'm pretty sure it isn't that."

"It may be extract of vanilla."

"No; it isn't extract of anything. By gracious! It makes me mad to think that I cannot remember a thing five minutes. Now, what in the world have I come in for anyhow?"

"Are you sure it isn't French mustard you want?"

"Positive, because I kept repeating the name of the thing all the way up the road, and it didn't slip my mind until I attempted to ask for it. I hate to go back home to find out what it is for fear of being laughed at. I know it isn't canned soup or mixed pickles or a broom"——

"Is it a package of split peas for soup?"

"No; it is not."

"Is it a jar of pickled walnuts or a box of sardines?"

"Neither of them."

"Is it a loaf of bread?"

"That's it, Sam; that's it. A loaf of bread. I knew we'd hit it before long. This poor memory of mine is so poor that sometimes I forget what my name is and have to go and look in the family Bible to find it."

And he departed, smiling, with the bread.

Mr. Multy's Story.

"Speakin' of stories gittin' started," remarked old Mr. Multy, as he rearranged the piles of brown wrapping-paper into a more comfortable cushion on the top of the nail-keg, "it does beat all. It comes mighty nigh going' hard with ol' Jim Johnsin once on account of a story growin' a little."

"Tell us about it," said the young new clerk, to whom most of the corner-store stories were as yet new.

"Well, you see," began Mr. Multy, old Dekin Swaller come home to dinner one day, an' he happens to say to Mrs. Swaller, 'I met young Slimmers to-day, an' he said that he heerd that Jim Johnsin was thinkin' of buyin' the widder Spriggins' place.'

"Jes as soon as the Dekin had gone down town agin Mrs. Swaller puts her shawl on an' steps across to Anastashy Soper's an' says: 'What do you s'pose I heerd this mornin'? Jim Johnsin has bought the widder Spriggins' place. I wonder if he's goin' to take the widder along with the rest of the prop'ty?'

"'Jes 's like as not,' says Anastashy; 'an' his wife not dead yet six months!'

"Soon as Mrs. Swaller 'd gone, Anastashy skipped over to ol' Mrs. Grumpy's. She had to talk loud to the ol' lady account o' her deefness, an' even then Mrs. Grumpy didn't ketch quite all she said, an' had to guess some.

"Anastashy says: 'Have you heerd the news? Jim Johnsin's goin' to marry widder Spriggins for her prop'ty.'

"'How?'

"'Jim Johnsin's goin' to marry the widder Spriggins for her prop'ty,'

"'No! Is 'e?'

"'That's what they say. I allus heerd he thought a good deal of the widder 'fore his first wife died.'

"'Yes, that's so What they goin' to do with Jim's two children?'

"'I don't believe the widder 'ill have 'em 'round. They'll prob'ly have to send 'em to the orphan asylum.'

"'How?'

"'Orphan asylum.' An' Anastashy she happened to think she'd left three pies in the oven, an' she skipped back home 'fore the old lady could half git the thing straight. She had roomatics so bad she couldn't get out to carry the news along, an' she was on nettles till young Mrs. Fred Gadabout, come in, an' then she says, all of a tremor, 'Did you hear the news? Jim Johnsin's goin' to marry the widder Spriggins to git the farm the old man Spriggins worked so hard to pay for.'

"'Goodness gracious!'

"'How?'

"'Goodness gracious!'

"'Who did?'

"'I say, goodness gracious!'

"'Yes, I guess so. An' Jim's two children has gone clean crazy 'bout it, an' they're talkin' 'bout it, an' they're talkin' 'bout sendin' 'em to the 'sylum.'

"'You don't tell me!'

"'How?'

"'You don't tell me!'

"'I haven't heerd, but there's been talk that Jim thought a good deal of the widder 'fore his first wife died, an' that maybe he pizened her.'

"'Mercy! He ought to be hung!'

"'How?'

"'They ought to hang him!'

"'Well,' says the old lady, kind o' chucklin' knowin'-like to herself—'well,' says she, 'if he marries the widder Spriggins he'll wish they had.'"—From the "Editor's Drawer," in Harper's Magazine for September.

The Two-Minute Trotter!—The New York Sun has some interesting figures as regards the development of trotting speed in this country during the last quarter-century, closing with the confident prediction that in view of the progress already achieved, sooner or later some "phenomenal flyer" will certainly start out of the crowd and make the mile in an even two minutes. We quote the statistics referred to:

It is just twenty five years since Goldsmith Maid made the trotting world wonder at three heats under 2.20. They were in 2 19¼, 2 19¾, and 2 19¼. The records of the Grand Circuit for 1894 make the Maid's figures read like those of a far up-country fair. The five meetings held so far, at Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, Rochester, and Poughkeepsie, giving nearly sixty trotting races, counting over two hundred heats, show, only twenty heats slower than 2 20. Of these, nine were by two-year-olds, three by three-year-olds, and several can be accounted for by rain and by the winner jogging in slowly in the last heat of a long-fought race. Everything else has been in 2 20 or better, as though practically the entire Grand Circuit trotting class was an army of Goldsmith Maids. Coming down second by second, there have been five races of which all heats were in 2.20 and better; two in the same way in 2 19, six in 2 18, eight in 2.17, seven in 2 16, two in 2.15, three in 2 14, three in 2 13, four in 2 12, three in 2 11, one in 2 10, and one in 2.09.

This does not yet tell entirely the story how the once peerless Goldsmith Maid has been left behind in the dust of a thundering track-full of faster-going animals. Three of the races classified above as 2.20 were of four heats. Two of the 2 19 class were of four, or five heats. Five of the 2 18 were of four, or five heats. Three of the 2.17 class were of four, or five heats. Three of the 2.16 class were of five heats. Two of the 2 15 class were of four, or five heats. One of the 2.13 class was of four heats. One of the 2.12 class was of five heats; and two of the 2 11 class were of four heats.

One race from without the Grand Circuit must be added to this remarkable record. Alix, at Terre Haute, repeated the straight heat victory of her sister of a quarter of a century ago, in 2.06, 2.06¼, 2.05¼. Three heats under 2 07, averaging under 2.06.

Major Brown's command was marching along a hot and dusty road in Southern Pennsylvania. Orders were very strict against foraging, but in spite of them a soldier suddenly sprang out of the ranks in pursuit of a fat gobbler standing among the sumach bushes on the roadside. The turkey started off in a hurry, with the man after him. Major Brown called out angrily: "Halt! What do you mean? Halt!" A few hurried steps and the soldier laid the turkey low with a blow from his rifle barrel. "There, dum ye!" he exclaimed, as he picked it up. "I reckon you'll understand that when the major says halt, he means halt!"

According to the recent census the United States produced 457,000,000 dozen eggs in 1879 and 817,000,000 dozen in 1889. These figures are more probably under than above the mark. At the figures given, however, the annual egg product of the country amounts of $100,000,000. Then, if to this be added the value of the poultry sold annually, an immense sum will be arrived at—one authority having placed it as high as $300,000,000.

The Judge decides that Sisters may be employed as teachers; that they may be attired in the garb of their order, and that they may be addressed by pupils by their religious names, but refuses to allow the Catholic Catechism to be taught. The costs were divided. The case will be appealed to the Supreme Court.

The mystery of where the pins go has never been solved, and the disappearance of the small coins is almost equally mysterious. Some one who has been investigating this subject says that half cents were coined up to 1857, and none has been returned to the mint for recoinage. Some hundreds are held by collectors, and the rest have absolutely disappeared. Of the old copper pennies, more than 100,000,000 still remain unaccounted for, save once in awhile we see a specimen. Four million five hundred thousand bronze 2 cent pieces were coined, and 3,000,000 are missing, and of nickel 3 cent pieces 2,000,000 are still outstanding, although the ordinary person does not handle six in a year.

An ordinance has been adopted by the council of Chambersburg restricting the speed of bicycle riders to 8 miles an hour and providing that each wheel ridden on the streets must be supplied with a lantern and a bell, gong or whistle. THE INCOME TAX.

The income tax, as established by the new tariff bill, is to be paid on the "gains, profits and income" for the year ending the 31st of December next. The section imposing the tax reads as follows:

"That from and after the first day of January, 1895, and until the first day of January, 1900, there shall be assessed, levied, collected and paid annually upon the gains, profits and income received in the preceding calendar year, by every citizen of the United States, whether residing therein, whether said gain, profits or income be derived from any kind of property, rents, interest, dividends, or salaries, or from any profession, trade, employment or vocation carried on in the United States or elsewhere, or from any other source whatever, a tax of two per centum on the amount so derived over and above $4,000, and a like tax shall be levied, collected and paid annually upon the gains, profits and income from all property owned and of every business, trade or profession carried on in the United States by persons residing without the United States."

The other sections relate to the enforcement and collection of the tax, penalties, etc. As has been often explained, there is no tax on an income below $4,000. If the taxable has an income, say, $5,000, he will pay two per cent. on $1,000 and so on.

Signs of Business Improvement.

First, the price of foreign exchange fell last week, checking the flow of gold. Second, there was a better demand for long-time loans and a greater disposition to ask higher interest, and commercial paper was more freely sold. Third, manufacturing establishments are getting ready to start up on full time and merchants are sending in orders, which indicates that they intend to fill up their exhausted stocks. The depression has continued so long that stocks of goods are low, and, therefore, some orders were to have been anticipated, but the indications are that they will be both more numerous and larger than they would have been if merchants were to continue the hand-to-mouth policy which has prevailed for two years. The passage of the tariff bill is certainly so confidently expected to restore confidence that merchants are preparing for a normal trade.—N. Y. World.

THE OLD GIVES PLACE TO THE NEW.

Perhaps within forty-eight hours after this issue one of the oldest and best known land marks and relics of Gettysburg will have been destroyed. It is with the greatest regret that we remove the old to give place to the new, yet it seems to be advisable and necessary. Unfortunately the old office was no longer either sufficiently commodious or suitable to the present business requirements.

Those associated with the COMPILER have tried for many years to acquire some information relating to the history of this old building, but efforts have been almost fruitless. We have been told, however, that the timber in it was cut on the land now between Baltimore street and the Philadelphia and Reading railroad tracks west of town. That in those days all the land in this neighborhood, west of Baltimore street, was set with heavy timber, and especially about where the Catholic church new stands. We conclude from reliable authority that this building is nearly, if not altogether, a century in age. It shows many signs of being very old. Every one of the original nails is hand-made wrought iron, with heads as large in some cases as a dime. The joists are logs, some of them a foot across.

This old structure was first occupied as the COMPILER office in May, 1863, and has since then been associated with every important public movement in Gettysburg and Adams county. It has been a business place known to many people for many years. It has been invariably a place where sound and Democratic principles have been discussed and upheld. The COMPILER has always been a synonym of Democracy.

We hope to put up in its place a building which will be an improvement to Gettysburg, where business may be done comfortably and with better facilities than now. With more room we will be better able to do all manner of work in our line better and quicker.

We would ask our subscribers and those who have business to do with us to call at the office of C. E. Stable, on this street, near the square. There will, of necessity, be some inconvenience to our patrons and to us during the time which will be required to put the new building up, but we hope to be able during that time, as always, to do business in an attentive and accommodating way.

WORK for the ticket, vote the straight ticket, get your friend to vote for the ticket, not part of it but all of it, and we will again be victorious.

THE LITERARY "FELLERS."

In all probability the Star and Sentinel will contain to-day the article going the rounds of Republican papers which is to the effect that Mr. Cleveland got some of the ideas of his letter to Mr. Catchings from various literary productions of other people. "Grain Merchant" writes to the Phila. Record:

"The literary, or, to be exact, perhaps we should say, the critical contingent of the Union League is, so to speak, agonized over alleged plagiarisms in the letter of the President to Mr. Catchings. The literary, if not the political education of most of these gentlemen, it is to be feared, is confined to about twenty minutes' perusal of the Philadelphia Press, in their libraries at home just after breakfast, or for about the same time after arriving at their respective offices. The writer, while being unable to claim to be literary or to set up to be critical, confesses to an admiration for the abilities of a person who can say what he desires to say, and say it as well as the President has done in the case under consideration even though in doing so he uses language similar to what had been used by some one else who had also something to say many years ago, and knew how to say it. This respect is naturally enhanced if the President's characterization of the trusts and combinations, "the communism of pelf," has not yet been found by the Union League and other critics to be a plagiarism. But as a late eminent Republican is said to have remarked on a critical occasion: "You cannot depend on these d—d literary fellers." GRAIN MERCHANT.

THE "STAR'S" ODD BLUNDER.

There were in the city of Philadelphia some years ago and are yet indeed, among others, two newspapers, called the Times and the Press.

Col. McClure then, as now, edited the Times, and a man, whom Col. McClure called, if we mistaken not, the Honorable Edward, edited the Press. Now it happened that this Honorable Edward was much given to disputation and he seemed to deem it wise and expedient to take exception to divers and sundry articles written by the editor of the Times. Presently it seemed that Col. began to notice this honorable gentleman, and, to make a long story short, the Col. sat on the Honorable Edward so hard that the Honorable Edward retired from the contest very much disfigured and not in the ring.

We are informed that this same Honorable Edward is now associated with the Gettysburg Star and that he is still much given to disputation. Whether or not this be true, there appeared in the Star last week an editorial in which we are concerned. It said, as it has frequently said, that the COMPILER errs in speaking of the tariff bill as the Wilson bill. It said: "The bill which became law last night at twelve o'clock —President Cleveland not approving or vetoing it but allowing it to become a law by lapse of time—is not the 'Wilson bill' at all."

It is an odd coincidence that the very next morning after this article was published in the Star, the Times, edited by this same Col. McClure, contained the following:

"The three important measures for which the two first sessions of the Fifty-third Congress will be remembered were the repeal of the Federal election laws, the repeal of the silver purchase act and the passage of the Wilson tariff bill with Senate amendments. The first restored to the States the control of their elections, the second put an end to the cheap silver folly, and the last, while falling short of complete tariff reform, put an end to McKinleyism and the collection of war duties upon imports in a time of peace."

In the second place the Star said: "The COMPILER eulogizes the bill as settling forever the tariff question!"

Now the fact is that the COMPILER said this: "The passage of the Wilson tariff bill settles the tariff policy of this government. No matter what party shall control the next administration of this government there will be no material departure from the tariff policy established by the Wilson bill."

The editor of the Star knows, as well as does anyone else, that the policy of high protection is no more. The people killed it and hereafter the policy of this government will be towards tariff reform. The truth of that is evidenced by the Republicans themselves in the apparent desire to change issues from tariff to anything else.

Then again said the Honorable gentleman:

"Cleveland was in 'dead earnest' in his desire to see the 'Wilson bill' adopted by the Senate. But he absolutely refused to approve the Senate bill, because he regarded its passage by that body an 'abandonment of Democratic principles.' Yet the COMPILER commends it as a good measure!"

Here again the Star misquotes us. We have said, and here repeat, that the bill as now passed is a vast improvement over the McKinley bill. As President Cleveland in effect, stated, it is not such a bill as was hoped for but is a far better bill than the corrupt, trust encouraging monopoly creating, Republican tariff bill. Mr. Cleveland spoke as follows:

"And yet, notwithstanding all its vicissitudes and all the bad treatment it received at the hands of pretended friends, it presents a vast improvement on existing conditions. It will certainly lighten many tariff burdens that now rest heavily upon the people. It is not only a barrier against the return of mad protection, but it furnishes a vantage ground from which must be waged further aggressive operations against protected monopoly and governmental favoritism."

In another place the editor of the Star writes: "The COMPILER of last week copies from the Williamsport Sun the statement," etc.—"We suppose that the lie," etc. Harsh language, very, and we will not use it in speaking of the Star, for the truth were better oftentimes unspoken.

The Honorable Edward is unfortunate in being so blindly partizan as to be sometimes forgetful, in his endeavor to catch somebody that other people may differ from him in his ideas and in his construction of other people's statements.

REMEMBER the call of the County Chairman for next Saturday, at the Globe Hotel. This is the time and opportunity to begin work.

REMEMBER that when a ticket is cut it means a gain for the other side. Let your principles control your vote. The party of the people is the Democratic party and it should receive the votes of all the people.

CONSIDERING the well-known brightness and luster of a star it seems almost paradoxical to say that the Star is not brilliant.

THE TROLLEY'S SLY TRICK.

If the Electric ralroad authorities propose to scandalize and injure other businesses of Gettysburg so that they may make money for themselves, we will be benefited if the United States will condemn the line and drive it from our town and vicinity. Subjoined is a copy of a circular which appeared on the grounds at Williams' Grove last week, making various misleading statements. The expression, "the same way," is false unless it means only in the same general direction and if it is intended to mean this, it should be so stated. This circular would, without doubt, cause visitors to be suspicious of our hackmen without any cause, for there has not been of late years the least complaint of overcharging. The trolley does not go to all the important points on the battlefield by a very large number, and does not give visitors even a glimpse of more than half of them. Our hackmen need protection from such statements as these, and we very gladly give them this space.

"GETTYSBURG"—NOTICE TO THE GRANGERS.—Don't let the hack drivers fool you by charging from 50c. to $5 00 to take you over the battlefield when the Gettysburg Electric Railway takes you over the field for 10c. the same way. Prof. Hankey, the Guide, will take you over, allowing the following "stop-offs," for twenty-five cents: National Cemetery, Meade's Headquarters, Peach Orchard, Wheatfield, Devil's Den, Little Round-Top and High-Water Mark. The Professor delivers a lecture from each point of interest.

The Electric Cars meet all trains at the Depot. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

ROASTED ALIVE.

Terrible Loss of Life in the Forest Fires of the Northwest.—Nine Minnesota and Wisconsin Towns in Ashes.—Four Hundred Pesons Killed and as Many More Injured by the Flames.

Dispatches from St. Paul, Minn., dated Sept. 2nd, says: Four hundred lives have been lost in the forest fires in Northwestern Minnesota and the neighboring sections of Wisconsin. The villages of Hinckley, Mission Creek and Sandstone, Minn., and the towns of Barothette, Granite Lake, Cumberland, Pineville, Comstock and Forest City, in Wisconsin, have been wiped out of existence. The money loss will reach into the millions.

The loss of life is variously estimate at from 300 to 400, and it is almost certain the loss will equal 300. One hundred and forth-eight charred bodies have already been recovered at Hinckley and forty-five at Sandstone, a neighboring town. Many others are injured, a number of whom will die.

The vast valley between the Kettle River and Cross Lake is laid waste, including several villages and settlements. Besides the towns that were reduced to ashes, farms were swept clean by the flames. The forest are still burning fiercely, and rain is required to drown the fires that are sweeping over a vast region. Whole families have been cremated. In some instances only one or two men escaped from a neighborhood to tell of the destruction. They saved their lives by running to small lakes or hiding in potato fields, and reached Pine City more dead than alive. The people from Hinckley and Mission Creek who escaped with their lives are destitute, having neither homes nor food. The walls of the railroad roundhouse and of the school house are the only parts of buildings in Hinckley which remain standing.

The Eastern Minnesota train, which left St. Paul at 1.05, and arrived at Hinckley at 6 o'clock, took 300 people on board and moved westward toward St. Cloud. The train has not been heard of since.

It has not reached St. Cloud and has not gone back to Hinckley. There is a general fear that it has been burned with all on board. There is no chance that they are alive, unless they heve found a stream or slough into which they could plunge and escape the fire.

A freight train is in the ditch one and a half miles west of Pokegama. Twenty-five people are in the caboose and the fire is all around them. If they are not rescued soon all must perish.

Hans Nelson, section foreman at Pokegama, started away yesterday afternoon with his family on a hard car to escape the fire, and nothing has since been seen or heard of them. It is certain they have perished.

—This morning's papers say that heavy rains are now falling in the burning regions.

SURPRISE PARTY.

For the Compiler.

Last Thursday, Aug. 30th, the children of Herman Hersh, living near New Chester, at Abraham Kunkle's, celebrated his 84th birthday. The guests took charge of the arrangements and served a bounteous repast, to which all did ample justice. The remainder of the day was spent in social enjoyment, and it was not until evening that the party dispersed. Among those present of the children were: Mrs. Geo. Deatrick, husband and daughter, Mrs. Abraham Kunkle, husband and two daughters, Mr. Hanson Hersh and son. Among the absent ones were Mr. Alfred Hersh, of Altoona; Mrs. Isaac Haverstock, of Arendtsville; Mrs. Robert McIlhenny, of Plainview. Grand children present—Mrs. Wallace Snyder, Miss Maggie Deatrick, C. T. Hersh and Miss Mamie Kunkle. Great-grand children present—Charlie, Irl and Elmer Snyder. The other guests present were: Rev. P. E. Heimer, wife and daughter, Rev. There being thirty-five present. C. T. H.

Hicks for September.

Rev. Ira R. Hicks, gives the following weather forecast for September: First night or two temperature may fall to frost traces in the north. From 3d to 7th a warm September wave may be expected. About 9th and 10th a great change to warmer weather. Electric crisis of the autumnal equinox occurs about 11th; equinox of Mercury is central on 12th and the moon in apposition on 14th, all of which facts indicate that the disturbances due on 9th and 10th will be prolonged into the storm period of 14th to 18th, and that many storms and gales will be encountered. Look out for storms also on 20th or 21st and days touching them. Last storm period from 25th to 29th. A very cool wave will wind up the month and usher in October.

Farmers' Institutes.

It is stated that Secretary Edge, of the State Board of Agriculture, chairman of the Committee on Local Farmers' Institutes, has secured the service of 160 lecturers on farm topics, who have prepared between 300 and 400 lectures. There will be also nine members of the faculty of the State Agriculture College and Experimental Station who will lecture when called upon, and sixteen veterinary surgeons who will give the farmers hints on the care of stock and the cure of diseases.

THE LAND OF PROMISE is the mighty West, the land that "tickled with a hoe laughs a harvest;" the El Dorado of the miner; the goal of the agricultural emigrant. While it teems with all the elements of wealth and prosperity, some of the fairest and most fruitful portions of it bear a harvest of malaria reaped in its fullness by those unprotected by a medicinal safeguard. No one seeking or dwelling in a malarial locality is safe from the scourge without Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Emigrants, bear this in mind. Commercial travelers sojourning in malarious regions should carry a bottle of the Bitters in the traditional gripsack. Against the effects of exposure, mental or bodily overwork, damp and unwholesome food or water, it is an infallible defense. Constipation, rheumatism, billiousness, dyspepsia, nervousness and loss of strength are all remedied by this genial restorative.

WHILE in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moins, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale at Huber's Drug Store.

$100 REWARD, $100.—The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

Struck by the Cars.

On Wednesday as Photographer Tipton's two horse wagon, driven by Robert Devan was rounding the corner of West Middle street into Washington, one of the trolley cars running at good speed came in contact with the team, throwing both horses, breaking a wheel and otherwise damaging the wagon Neither the driver nor horses were injured, though the scene is said to have been very exciting for a time

Yesterday a large excursion from Baltimore so crowded the trolley cars that many rode on the foot boards In the afternoon, on the Emmitsburg road one of the excursionists, Mr Harry Weil while trying to assist an elderly gentleman, was struck by one of the poles which are very close to the cars and thrown off, breaking a finger which Dr Scott adjusted though amputation may be necessary

Sunday Ed Weikert, of Gettysburg, while on his way home from a visit to his parents, says the Oxford Item, passed Guldon's Station on the Western Maryland railroad While driving along side the track the horse that he was driving began kicking and backed into a train that was passing at the time The carriage was completely wrecked, the horse badly cut and bruised, Mr Weikert escaping with a few bad bruises At the time of the accident he had in his buggy seventeen live chickens and a half bushel of tomatoes Five live chickens and three whole tomatoes were the only things saved out of the wreck

Inspection of Jail and Alms-house

Cadwalader Biddle, Esq, Secretary and Agent of the State Board of Public Charities, Geo W Ryon Esq and Dr J W C O'Neal, members of the board met here last Friday to examine into the condition of the Jail and Alms house They reported both in excellent condition and recommended a water plug in the square at the Alms house for fire protection, and the water in the Jail for hygienic purposes

ACCIDENT

On Friday afternoon, as Mr Samuel Althoff, of Mountpleasant township was driving home from Gettysburg in passing a boy playing with a wheel of a grain drill, his horse frightened and threw the buggy down a bank on the side of the road A gentleman passing found Mr Althoff suffering and took him to Dr Noel's in Bonneauville, who, on examination, discovered a rib broken and injuries about the head The unfortunate man was taken home and is doing well

Welcoming the New Pastor.

On Friday evening a large number of the members of St James Lutheran church of this place as well as the other denominations gathered in the lecture room of the church to meet the new pastor Rev A R Steck, of Indianapolis who arrived the day previous Rev D P Drewbaugh, of the Theological Seminary in a neat address extended the cordial greetings of the people to Mr Steck who responded in a feeling and happy vein Rev W F Main, who has temporarily filled the pulpit spoke briefly of the relations between the pastor and people Music appropriate to the occasion was rendered by the church choir after which Mr Steck and wife were made acquainted with the parishioners and others and several hours were spent in a pleasant social manner

The new pastor, a son of the highly esteemed former pastor Rev Dr D Steck who so ably filled this pulpit years ago is no stranger here having spent his earlier years in our midst and receiving his education at the institution here His many friends are glad to welcome him and join in best wishes for abundant fruits from his labors in the ministry in Gettysburg

Improvements.

The Highway Committee of Town Council has had Stratton avenue graded and the old water course changed so as to enable property holders to lay pavements and gutters

The new street being opened by Mr Martin Winter north of Lincoln street will be an extensive and useful improvement to Gettysburg The intention is to open a series of new streets from the Carlisle road westward to a point near the P & R railroad thence south along the College property crossing the W M tracks to the Chambersburg pike Lincoln street will be opened west to meet this new street It is proposed also to extend Washington street to Lincoln and close part of the Mummasburg pike The plan includes an extension of Mr Winter's new street through the Alms house and old Kunz properties to the Harrisburg road This new street as yet unnamed, now being opened, will be 80 feet wide with the building line 25 feet back on each side making 130 feet from house to house It will be one of the most pleasantly located avenues in Gettysburg

BIRTHDAY PARTY

When the numerous teams from the neighboring towns and surrounding country drove up before the Mountain House hotel in Arendtsville last Tuesday evening and many of our people from the town and country were seen to assemble in the parlors of the hotel, it was plainly evident that an event of more than usual interest would characterize the evening It was the birthday of Mrs Aaron Schlosser wife of the Proprietor of the Mountain House hotel in whose house a surprise party was given by her many friends and associates

One of the principal features of the evening was the playing of several choice and appropriate pieces of music by the Mountain Valley band which was tendered in their usual manner of completeness and excellence About 10 p m the large and spacious dining rooms were opened, containing four large tables on which were luxuriously spread many refreshments calculated to stimulate those nerve aliments of the palate and characterize an evening of pleasure Around those tables 55 invited guests were seated at which time toasts were given in which the congratulations of this assembly were extended to Mrs Schlosser and also their kind wishes for the continuance of her life of happiness and association as a wife, a neighbor and a friend Guest

The Road to Little town

It is rumored that Mr Hofter proposed to have three surveys made for his road to Littlestown one by way of Round Top, one by the Baltimore Pike and one by Bonneauville and also that he has made arrangements with the Baltimore Pike authorities for the purchase of the road The latter, however, appears to be a mistake

EARTH

Oh death a mother's aching heart,
A father's sob beside the silent tomb
Why come with sickle keen and sharp,
To reap Our Cora from a happy home?
She was our joy, our darling and our pride,
We thought to see her bloom into a gem,
And now the bud has withered she has died,
We never more will see her face again

HEAVEN

No death! It was an angel's voice,
Sounding from out the heavenly choir
A child is born! let hosts rejoice
And myriads touch the trembling lyre
Rejoice! rejoice a name in gold
Appears upon the heavenly dome—
"Our Cora" safe within the fold,
Resting serenely in the Father's home

FARMING SUGGESTIONS.

By Observing these Hints Stock will be More Profitable to the Farmer.---

Horticultural.

—Plan a rotation for the garden.

—Plan to grow better fruit, rather than more.

—Undersized fruit of any kind is undesirable to grow, either for market or home use.

—Branches should never be broken off; if necessary to remove, cut off clean and smooth.

—To be good a tree must be of a good variety and have a good healthy habit of its own.

—One advantage in using commercial fertilizers in the garden is their freedom from weed seeds.

—One advantage with small fruit growing is that a few acres of ground will readily keep a man employed.

—Tobacco is a valuable insecticide against greenhouse pests, used in the form of decoction, or smoke, or dry.

—In going into small growing for market it is nearly always best to grow nearly or quite all kinds rather than to make a specialty of one.

—The hardy varieties of cherries can often be grown in fields where the stock are pastured, as they will stand tramping, while the fruit will not injure the stock.

—During the winter is a good time to prepare for spring planting. One advantage in preparing ahead is that a better opportunity is afforded of getting the work done in good season.

—Blackberries are so plentiful in many localities that it seems almost useless to cultivate them; yet better fruit, both in yield and quality can be secured more conveniently by growing them.

—It is because farmers are so careless in the way they set out their trees and the lack of care afterwards that affords the opportunity for the fruit tree agent to thrive, otherwise the country would have been filled up with trees long ago.

The Poultry Yard.

—It pays to fatten well all poultry sent to market.

—Much fat producing food is not best for laying fowls.

—Winter is the most expensive season for poultry feeding.

—Useless roosters fed through the winter lessen the profits.

—A warm house not only saves feed, but also helps to secure eggs.

—It requires a little more care to look after early chickens, but they sell higher.

—Unlimited range, while not strictly necessary, is, at least, a great saving of food.

—One item in raising turkeys is to be able to afford them a good range.

—It is a very important item with young chickens and turkeys to keep them free from lice.

—With good management all of the poultry on the farm can be improved by the use of good males.

—Keep chickens intended for early market in close quarters and put the growth on as rapidly as possible.

—Poultry manure contains all of the solid as well as the liquid excrements, and hence is very fertilizing.

—Many fail to secure the best profit by keeping too large a number of old fowls on hand that should have been marketed.

Swine Husbandry.

—It is said that corn is a poor feed for a pregnant sow.

—There is considerable risk in holding hogs for higher prices.

—It is the half starved pig that is an everlasting creeper and climber.

—Keep the boar thrifty by supplying plenty of exercise and a variety of food.

—Keep the boar confined from the start, if you want to keep him under control.

—Animals selected for breeding should be cared for so as to keep thrifty.

—The principal objection to winter pork making is the expense necessary to maintain animal heat.

—The hog thrives best with a variety in his food, while it will also help to maintain better health.

—In many cases when whole corn must be fed to young pigs it will pay to soak twelve hours before feeding.

—The hog breeds and increases so rapidly that they are the best stock for the farmer who is cramped for capital.

—One decided advantage in giving the sows good care is that a less number is required to secure a certain number of pigs.

—It used to be considered that with a hog all that he had to do was to eat and sleep, but now the health, too, must be looked after.

—A hog will thrive on a greater quantity of food than any other farm animal, yet he needs a variety in order to keep in the best condition.

—In order to afford a good opportunity for exercise the boar should always have a yard connected with his quarters, where he can have a full range.

—Hogs are proverbially greedy when brought to hunger by the long intervals between feeding, but if hogs are given all that they will eat up clean at each meal, there is but little, if any danger of overfeeding.

Sheep and Wool.

—In starting a flock select good sheep and then breed to keep them up.

—It costs as much to grow poor wool as it does that of a better quality.

—Regular feeding and a steady growth make good wool as well as good lambs.

—With sheep, as with cattle and hogs, there is a growing tendency towards early maturity.

—While it is an important item to grow good wool, it is also important to keep it reasonably clean while it is growing.

—By crossing the short-wooled breeds, you can increase the size and fattening propensities, using an Oxford ram.

—By crossing the long-wooled breeds you improve both the wool and muttons in quality without losing weight, using an Oxford ram.

—The best indications that lambs are getting sufficient nourishment is a well-rounded body and a clean face and bright, clean wool.

—Sheep cannot be multiplied as rapidly as hogs, but they represent a more varied market and come to market earlier than either cattle or horses.

—The staple income of the average farm comes from those crops or products that can be stored when harvested and either fed out or sold then or later or at a more convenient time. Wool is one of these.

Deadly Cattle Disease.

Secretary Edge, of the State board of agriculture, returned to Harrisburg form Tyrone last Tuesday where he had been investigating the reports relative to disease stricken cattle and their pollution of the Tyrone water supply. Secretary Edge finds that the disease is anthrax, a loathsome and contagious blood disease. He was fearful lest the ailment was Texan fever, a disease brought to this section by southern cattle. There is no remedy for anthrax. It is not uncommon at this season of the year.

Apples Better Than Wheat.

Some Startling Figuring Done by an Enthusiastic Oregon Editor.

That it will not do to put all of one's eggs in one basket has been thoroughly demonstrated by the berry crop this season. With thousands of crates ripe the ability to reach a market is without any fault of ours suddenly taken away. The strawberry crop has been the principal one of this section, and while it will not only hold its present yield, but will double and treble it, it will in a year or two become of secondary importance. Prunes, peaches, cherries and small fruits generally are a necessity to the fruitgrower because they furnish him with money early in the season was well as early in his business. They are a means to an end, furnishing money to support the family and to improve the farms. They all bear one fatal objection as a crop to be relied upon, and that is the absolute necessity of finding a market for them as soon as they are ripe. This may not be true of the prune, but for it the same condition exists—it must be taken care of at once when ripe.

The fruit of Hood River, the one that is to make her famous as well as prosperous, is the winter apple. That can be kept. It can be gathered leisurely, once in bearing, bring better and steadier returns and at the very least outlay. John Sweeny's orchard last year, its first year of bearing, produced more net money than would or could have been derived from the same area of land sown to wheat in 36 years. This year it should yield 50 times as much, next year 70 times as much, and then for 20 years 100 times as much. In other words, one acre of winter apples is worth more, year in and year out, than 100 acres of wheat. Six acres of good orchard will yield a larger net yield than a section of wheat land. Multiply the acre in Hood River valley by 100 and some idea of the wealth that it will eventually produce may be gained.

In other words, every section in fruit will produce a cash value equal to three townships of wheat. The winter apple is going to accomplish this result, and the next few years as the young orchards come into bearing will prove the truth of this assertion, though it now seems a wild one. We can but reiterate our former words: "Plant apple trees. Twenty acres if you can; one tree if that is your limit, but plant at every opportunity." When this valley is an orchard from the mills to the summit east of us and from the river back for 20 miles, then only will it have attained its full development.—Hood River (Or.) Glacier.

Wheat---Corn---Meat.

Every day brings evidence of an increasing tendency among stock feeders to substitute wheat for corn. Many farmers in this section of the country are now using about 33 per cent. of wheat with the corn and oats, which they feed to their cattle, hogs and horses. This movement is of two-fold importance. It will minimize the bad effects of a shortage in the corn crop and must eventually enhance the market value of wheat. The latter is cheaper than corn, not only because the price is lower, but because the experience of many stock raisers has demonstrated that the results of its use for cattle and hogs feeding are relatively more profitable.

There is abundant evidence that the production of corn will not be large enough to depress prices materially, even if 20 per cent. of the wheat yield should be used for animal food. But such an additional consumption must ultimately affect the wheat markets to the advantage of producers. The country will have less to spare for export, but it should get a larger money return for smaller shipments. Incidentally, too, the whole community will be benefited, since the increased use of wheat will arrest a threatened further enhancement of the cost of meats.

The reports from the wheatfields of the Northwest are reassuring. The yield of spring wheat, which at the close of July seemed likely to fall as low as 100,000,000 bushels, is now expected to approximate 150,000,000 bushels. Taken in connection with the larger outturn of winter wheat the latest reports indicate that early estimates of the country's wheat production were at least 100,000,000 bushels too low. The supply in excess of what the public had come to regard as the maximum crop yield may be considered as a natural windfall to help along the dawning business revival. With 100,000,000 bushels more wheat than had been expected the country may take its disappointment about the corn yield with greater complacency.—Phila. Record.

Cattle Interests.

—One advantage in raising cattle is that with good treatment they are rarely sick.

—Good feeders claim that dairy production along with beef raising should not be considered.

—With cattle, especially, we must distinguish between merits of animals and their value to us.

—Feed the calf well and you encourage and intensify the tendency to put on flesh more rapidly.

—Scrub cattle, no matter how well they are fed will not make cattle that will sell at the top of the market.

—Early maturing cattle must be well cared for; the best growth cannot be secured where they must rustle.

—Know what the cattle cost you when ready for market. This is the only accurate way of fully determining the profits.

—The lesson is being learned that early maturing breeds may be sold with the most profit if they are pushed from the start.

—A quick growth and a tendency to put on flesh rapidly are qualities that can be increased in any herd with an increase of profit.

—It is only the class of cattle that brings the highest prices when placed upon the market that pays the owner anything like a fair profit.

Stock on the Farm.

It pays to keep stock on the farm, even when the price is very low. Animals can always be disposed of at prices that pays for cost of feed and labor spent on them. One of the best reasons for keeping live stock, however, is that with it the farm steadily grows richer and produces larger crops. An exchange says, speaking of this subject. "The farmer who sells a ton of wheat worth, say, $20 to $25, sells $7.75 worth of nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, while the farmer who sells a ton of sheep worth $80 to $100 sells only $9.45 of fertility."

WHAT HAS CONGRESS DONE?

It has made elections free by the repeal of the Force bill.

It has stopped the purchase and storage of silver bullion.

It has passed a stringent Anti-Trust law.

It has saved millions of dollars to taxpayers by the repeal of the McKinley act.

If nothing more had been accomplished than what is above recited the Fifty-third Congress would have earned the lasting gratitude of the people.—Record.

SHERIDAN'S Condition POWDER
Keep Chickens Strong and healthy; it gets your pullets to laying early; it is worth its weight in gold when hens moult; it prevents all disease, Cholera, Roup, Diarrhœa, Leg-weakness. It is a powerful food digestive. Large cans are most economical to buy.
NOTHING ON EARTH WILL MAKE HENS LAY LIKE SHERIDAN'S CONDITION POWDER
Therefore, no matter what kind of feed you use, mix with it daily Sheridan's Powder. Otherwise, your profit this fall and winter will be lost when the price for eggs is very high. It assures perfect assimilation of the food elements needed to produce health and form eggs.
It is absolutely pure; highly concentrated; therefore used in small doses; no other kind one fourth as strong. In quantity it costs less than one-tenth cent a day per hen. "One large can saved me $40; send six more to prevent roup this winter" says a customer. Sold by druggists, grocers and feed dealers. No other ever made like it.

Overjumped by a Lion.

"As to grizzly bears," said a Montana man the other evening, as he lifted his feet a peg higher and took a long pull at his cigar, "as to grizzly bears, we've got plenty of 'em left in our country, but unless you are looking for them you might travel the trails and byways for five years and not get sight of old Ephraim. As big and savage as they are they avoid mankind when it is possible. I've heard 'em moving off in the thickets many a time as I rode along a wild trail, but in fifteen years I have had a fair sight of only one, and he was anxious to get away."

"How about the mountain lion?"

"Ah! you've struck quite another field now," he replied. "The mountain lion of the far west is not a lion at all, as you probably know, but is the beast known in the east as the panther. I think, however, the western panther is larger and fiercer. At any rate, all things considered, I'd prefer to face a grizzly."

"Ever had any experience?"

"Yes, just one, and it makes my hair stand on end to think of it. I'm half owner of a good, big herd of steers, but I wouldn't go through that experience again for a thousand of the fattest, juicest steers ever rounded up in the cattle country. You want to hear about it, but its no use to get out your book and pencil. My experience was very brief, and there are no names and dates to put down. Look on the map some day and find Flat Head lake. Between it and the Rocky Mountains is a beautiful valley thirty miles wide. I've wintered cattle in there and had them come out as fat as butter in the spring."

"Yes, go on."

"One spring, eight or ten years ago, I was driving in some 'strays' from the foothills. When cattle began to shed their coats they like to get into timber and rub themselves. About 10 o'clock in the forenoon I was riding along an Indian trail on the slope of a hill. It was in the timber, with lots of brush covering the ground. I saw cattle tracks on the trail and had no thought of anything else. My mustang was on the walk and I was taking it easy in the saddle, when I was suddenly jumped out of my boots. Something screamed in my ear, and out of the corner of my eye I saw something in the air. No doubt I ducked, but it was instinct. In the same breath there was a great crash in the top of a bush to my right and below me, and just as my mustang started on a wild run I made out what the object was."

"A mountain lion, sir?"

"Yes, and a whopping big one, and the snarls and growls and screams he uttered lifted me in my stirrups. He landed in that bush on his back, with his legs sticking up like posts, but I don't reckon it took him over five seconds to turn right side up. He may have started to follow me, though he was more apt to slink away, but the mustang would have given him a hard race. He was wild with fright, and the way he did smoke along that trail and get down into the valley would have made a jack rabbit wonder how the wings were fastened on. As a matter of fact he wasn't going fast enough for me."

"The lion had jumped for you?"

"He had, my boy. I went up and figured it out afterward. The beast had crouched on a big rock eighteen feet above me and about twenty-four feet from the trail. Just how close he came to me I can't say, but I am certain that he brushed my hat as he passed over. The duck probably saved my life. If he had struck me with the momentum of such a spring I'd have been carried out of the saddle into the bushes. The cuss was lying low for beef or deer, but when I came along he thought he had a better thing. As he missed me he turned over in the air, and as I told you he landed wrong side up. I don't know how mountain lions feel about such things, but I've always had the idea that this fellow went off kicking himself over the way he got left. He had overjumped a good dinner and couldn't blame anybody but himself."—Detroit Free Press.

SEASONABLE RECEIPTS.

Try Them.

GRAPE MARMALADE.—Put the grapes in a stone pot, and set the pot into a fire and boil until the grapes will mash easily; stir them often, and jam with bowl of the spoon. Take them up and strain through a sieve. To a quart of the pulp allow a pint of sugar, and boil 40 minutes.

PEAR MARMALADE.—A very excellent marmalade may be made with pears, to use in making tartlets. Boil six good-sized pears to a pulp; weigh them; take half their weight of sugar, put it into a saucepan with a very little water; boil it and skim it while boiling. When boiled to a crack, add the pulp of the pears and give it a boil; and add about four drops of essence of cloves; when it is cold it is ready for use.

APPLE MARMALADE.—Three pounds of apples, one and one-half pounds loaf sugar, one-half pint sherry, one quince and a few cloves.—Approximate cost 30 cents. Peel and core the apples and quince, cut in eight parts, put all the ingredients together in a preserving pan; cook slowly, simmering for two hours; put in jars and cover down when cold.

APPLE PIE.—One-fourth pound puff paste, two pounds apples, six ounces sugar, six cloves, the rind of a lemon, finely minced; a little nutmeg, a blade of mace. Approximate cost, 30 cents.

Pare and core the apples, cut them in thin slices, and lay part of them in a pie-dish, sprinkling over them the sugar, cloves, lemon-rind and nutmeg; put in another layer of apples. Boil the parings and cores of the apples in a little water with the mace, till the flavor is extracted, strain it, add a little sugar and boil till reduced to a small quantity; pour over the apples, put some puff paste on the edge of the dish, cover with the paste and bake in a brisk oven.

PICKLED PEARS.—Pare and halve the fruit, place in a porcelain kettle, cover with water, and boil soft. Put in a jar, and pour on the spiced vinegar. If any of the fruit does not soften in the water, boil it in the vinegar 10 or 15 minutes.

BAKED PEARS.—Molasses and water in the bottom of a tin; bake the pears until soft; or stew them in molasses and water, half and half.

CANNED PEARS.—Pare, halve and core, and boil until soft; then add one-third pound fruit, and let the whole just come to a boil; heat sugar with a little water; add lemon if desired.

BROOKLYN CAKE.—Two cups of sugar, two-thirds cup of butter, one and one-half cups of sweet milk, one cup of raisins, five cups of flour and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in one large pan or two small ones. This cake keeps well.

HARRY MILTON UPP, alias Harry Milton, of York, pleaded guilty in the United States district court in Philadelphia to sending an immoral book through the mails. Anthony Comstock ran the case down. The defendant had for many years been principal of a high school. Judge Butler severely lectured the defendant and told him that it was fortunate for him that it was only his province to sentence him for using the mails for improper purposes, and not for distributing such a work. The judge added that it was the worst case that had come before him. The sentence was a fine of $500 and two years imprisonment.

ANALYZING FERTILIZERS.

Nearly 2,000 Samples Have Been Sent to the State Board of Agriculture to August 1---Retests Made in Case of Protest.

During the year ending August 1, 1894, the special agents of the state board of agriculture have selected and sent to the department 1,725 samples of commercial fertilizers selected in all parts of the state. These samples, selected by special agents under oath or affirmation, are taken without the knowledge of the manufacturers, sent to the department where they receive a number and are analyzed by five chemists employed for that purpose and who only know them by their number, not being informed whose fertilizer they are testing.

The chemists' reports are made to the department upon blanks prepared for that purpose. A duplicate blank is in all cases sent to the manufacturer and ten days allowed for filing protests against the results as reported. If a protest is filed a retest is made and if it agrees with the former one, becomes the official record of that brand and manufacturer. If no protest is filed within the prescribed time the analysis is assumed to be correct. All analyses are published in pamphlet form and in addition to showing the percentage of phosphoric acid, potash and nitrogen also show the "comparative commercial value" of the fertilizer or the price at which the ingredients can be purchased and placed upon the market ready mixed for application. With one of these lists at hand any farmer may readily know which of the 675 brands offered and sold in the state will give him the best return for the money expended.

During preceding years the state board of agriculture has had considerable trouble from manufacturers of fertilizers who by failing to take out the proper license on the 1st of August as required by law, have rendered all agents offering or selling their fertilizers personally liable to heavy penalties. This year the department has decided to notify all manufacturers twice and then proceed to hold all agents offering or selling unlicensed goods, and all manufacturers, liable for the full penalties of the act of June 28, 1879.

The second notice have been sent out to all manufacturers who in former years have offered or sold fertilizers in the state; this has always been done voluntarily by the department and is not required by law. Under a strict construction of the law every agent offering or selling unlicensed fertilizers after August 1 of each year is subject to a penalty of $25 for the first offence and $200 for each subsequent offence, one half the penalty in all cases going to the informer.—Patriot.

A Farmer's Awful Death.

William Howey, 65 years old, a farmer living at Mullica Hill, Gloucester county, N. J., was gored to death by a bull on Saturday. No one saw the savage attack of the animal, and the death of Mr. Howey did not become known to his family and friends until a searching party found his mangled body in a meadow nearly half a mile from his home.

The first intimation that anything had happened to the farmer was when his dog came home at night in an exhausted condition. As Mrs. Howey had not seen her husband since morning, when he started out to milk the cows, she became alarmed, and a searching party was organized. Several hours later his mangled corpse was found. An examination of the field showed both man and dog had fought desperately for life, but they were no match for the enraged bull. When death had ended the unequal struggle the faithful canine had gone home and mutely appealed for help for his master. The body of Mr. Howey had been rolled over the ground for a distance of [illegible] feet, and was badly cut by the horns and hoofs of the maddened animal.—Exchange.

AN IDEAL WOMAN'S MAGAZINE.

The literary passions of a literary man are always interesting and they are peculiarly so when an author of such renown as William Dean Howells tells of them. The tenth installment of Mr. Howells' literary biography under the title of "My Literary Passions" appears in the September Ladies' Home Journal. Next in interest to Mr. Howell's contribution comes a page devoted to "The Daughter in the Home," by Mrs. Burton Kingsland, Mrs. Hamilton Mott and the editor of the Journal. A particularly helpful article in response to a question, "What Are Building Societies?" is contributed by Mr. Addison B. Burk, so widely known as an authority upon the subject. Mrs. Van Koert Schuyler writes most earnestly on the subject of women "Living Beyond Their Strength." The fourth paper of Mrs. Burton Kingsland's series, "A Daughter at Sixteen," is given. A clever short story by "Octave Thanet," entitled "Miss Maria's Fiftieth," is charmingly illustrated by Alice Barber Stephens and Mr. Frank R. Stockton brings to a conclusion "Pomona's" most recent travels. Harriet Ogden Morrison gives a page of exquisite designs for "Artistic Piano Covers," and J. Harry Adams contributes some handsome designs for "The Mantel and the Fireplace." Mrs. Mallon's pages, with original designs for "The Bonnets of the Autumn" and "This Autumn's Velvet Coats," will delight all woman, and mothers everywhere will be pleased with Miss Hooper's valuable suggestions on "A Schoolgirl's Outfit." Other articles in this issue are Miss Scovil's "Physical Culture of Children," and Helen Jay's "The Farmer's Wife and Her Boys." Altogether this September issue, with its artistic cover by W. T. Smedley, is an ideal magazine which every woman will do well to have. Published by The Curtis Publishing Company, of Philadelphia, for ten cents per number and one dollar per year.

A GOOD RETORT—At the breaking out of the Crimean War, Rachel, the celebrated French actress, was in St. Petersburg. Just before leaving the Russian capital some of the Russian officers gave a banquet in her honor. One of the Russian officers, a nobleman of high rank, said to Rachel in a bantering sort of way:

"We will not bid you good-bye, but merely say au revoir, for we will soon be in Paris to drink your health in sparkling champagne."

"Monsieur," replied Rachel, "France is not rich enough to treat all her prisoners of war to champagne."

IT may be necessary for the Chinese and Japs to quit fighting until it can be determined as to which side is telling the truth.—Washington Post.

"I HAVE met the enemy," says New York Woman Suffrage, "and he's a very obstinate gentleman."—N. Y. World.
